Abstract

Distribution of processing activity across processing hardware based on power consumption and/or thermal considerations. One embodiment includes a plurality of processing units and a monitor to obtain monitor (e.g., power consumption, or temperature or some combination thereof) values from the processing units. The monitor transfers a process from one processing unit to another in response to the monitor values from the processing units.